ONLINE Driver Education

Out of the Dark Ages and into the 21st Century

Idaho Law Requires a “Distance Learning” option.

- Idaho Statute §33-1702 provides for a home correspondence course for the classroom portion only.
- This has not been promoted because the quality of our mail-in paper course is not very good and the practice of not having a teacher involved is unacceptable.
- Primarily special needs or home-schooled students have requested it – and only a few have ever done it this way in Idaho.

IDLA and Idaho Driver Education

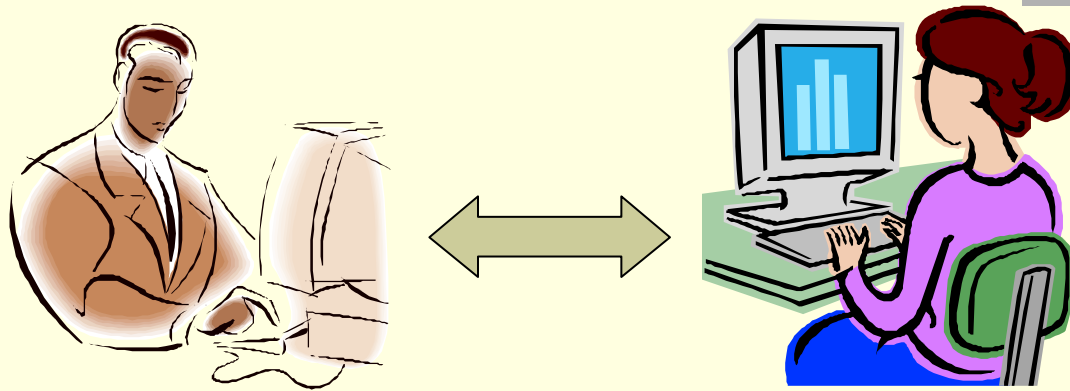

- In 2006, IDLA partnered with the Idaho State Department of Education to offer the classroom portion of Driver Education online.
 - Meets our requirement of offering a distance learning option.
 - Students work through the same curriculum as all Idaho Driver Education classes.
 - Students find a local in-car instructor who will contract with the local high school to provide the in-car instruction.
 - Communication is the key to success!
 - Classroom and in-car lessons must be done at the same time.
 - IDLA provides certified Driver Education instructors who are online every day with the students.

Is Online Education Just a Trend?

NO!

- Over 1,000,000 students across the U.S. are currently taking online courses!
- 38 states have e-learning initiatives.
- 25 states have state-supported virtual schools.
- 173 virtual charter schools exist.
- In April, 2006 Michigan became the first state to require an online learning experience to graduate high school.
- Entire higher ed. programs can be taken online at the best universities all over the country, including masters and doctorate programs.

A Quality Online Program

- The most important part of a quality online class, Driver Education or otherwise, is an active participating online instructor.
- Anyone can put curriculum online, but it's the certified instructor's guidance and feedback that makes the difference.

How does the online Driver Ed. course help Idaho students?

Every student in the class has a voice – there is no “back row” where students can hide. They all speak up and share their thoughts and ideas and interact with one another and the instructor.

With an online course, students can remain in sports or music programs after school AND take Driver Education. The class is asynchronous, meaning it goes on 24/7; it has weekly deadlines but no set hours.

The Future of Education Posted by: Valerie Doherty

How do you think education will look in the year 2020?

We are interested in hearing what today's students think the future classroom will be. Please take a moment and email your vision to dvakili@idahodigitallearning.org.

Sun, Oct 15, 2006 -- Introduction Posted by: Mr. Johns

IDLA offers a strong, standards-based Driver Education program available to all students in the state of Idaho. This course lasts nine weeks (plus a week for the final exam) instead of the traditional six, yet it is still difficult to get all the required coursework in. We don't pick and choose from the state's stringent curriculum, we teach it all! Our students complete the work in all ten of the state's approved Driver's Education units and all twenty of its modules.

Driver's Education online? You bet. At IDLA, classroom information and activities are individualized and every student gets the opportunity to have a voice.
